Verse 1: The Cows Come Home

In the velvety darkness, the cows amble home through the fields, Their hooves gently tapping in a rhythmic beat, Their milk-filled udders swaying to the melody's sweet yields.

"I want your hooves, under the moonlight's gentle glow I want your moooooo, a lullaby that eases all my woe Oh, come to me, my bovine friends, and let your presence mend My weary soul, as I drift off to a peaceful bed."

Verse 2: The Chickens Roost

In the coop, the chickens prepare for the night, Their feathers ruffled, their eyes closed tight, As the last rays of sunlight fade into the starry height.

"I want your cluck, a gentle lullaby I want your coo, a soothing melody to lull me into the sky Oh, come to me, my feathered friends, and let your chorus blend With the whispers of the wind, as I surrender to slumber's end."

Verse 3: The Pigs Snore

In the sty, the pigs sleep soundly, Their bellies full, their dreams profoundly,
As they snore in unison, a symphony of the ground.

"I want your snore, a gentle lullaby I want your oink, a chorus that makes me fly Oh, come to me, my piggy friends, and let your snores blend With the whispers of the breeze, as I drift off into ease."

Chorus: The Barnyard's Symphony

In the barnyard, a symphony unfolds, A chorus of snores, clucks, and moos, so bold, As the animals slumber, their spirits unfold.

"I want your barnyard sounds, a lullaby so divine I want your harmony, a symphony to make my dreams shine Oh, come to me, my animal friends, and let your chorus blend As I drift off to sleep, in your embrace, I'll no longer fend."

Outro: Sweet Dreams

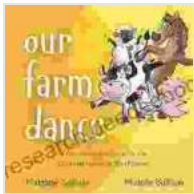

As the moon casts its silver glow, The barnyard animals sleep in a row,
Their dreams filled with haystacks and sweet, juicy flow.

"In this barnyard dreamland, where slumber deeply grows, I'll leave you, my animal friends, as the night softly glows May your rest be sweet, your dreams take flight And when the morning wakes, you'll greet the day with all your might."

So to all the cows, chickens, and pigs, goodnight, May your slumber be peaceful, and your dreams take flight, As the barnyard bedtime song fills the air with delight, May it soothe your souls and make your spirits bright.
