Nestled in the heart of Chinatown, between the bustling streets of Grant Avenue and Stockton Street, lies a hidden gem: Temple Alley. Founded by Summer Avery Fischer Udagawa, this is no ordinary bookstore. It is a literary sanctuary, a place where books, art, and community intertwine.

As you step into Temple Alley, you are greeted by a warm and inviting atmosphere. The shelves are lined with an eclectic collection of books, from classic literature to contemporary fiction, poetry, and art books. The walls are adorned with local artwork, and the air is filled with the scent of incense.

Summer, the founder and owner of Temple Alley, is a writer, curator, and community activist. She founded Temple Alley in 2016 with the mission of creating a space where people could come together to share their love of literature and art.

Temple Alley is more than just a bookstore. It is a place where people can gather for readings, workshops, and other events. Summer is passionate about creating a space that is inclusive and welcoming to everyone, regardless of their background or beliefs.

One of the things that makes Temple Alley so special is its commitment to community engagement. Summer works closely with local schools and organizations to bring books and literary programs to underserved communities. She also hosts regular events that bring together writers, artists, and community members.

Temple Alley is a vital part of the Chinatown community. It is a place where people can come together to celebrate their culture and heritage, and to connect with others who share their love of literature and art.

The Collection

The collection at Temple Alley is eclectic and ever-changing. Summer handpicks each book, with a focus on books that are diverse, thought-provoking, and beautiful. You will find a wide range of genres, including fiction, non-fiction, poetry, art books, and children's books.

Summer is also committed to supporting local authors and publishers. She stocks a wide range of books from local presses and authors, and she regularly hosts events featuring local writers.

Events and Programs

Temple Alley hosts a variety of events and programs throughout the year, including readings, workshops, and community events. These events are a great way to connect with other book lovers and to learn more about the literary world.

Some of the past events at Temple Alley have included:

- A reading by the poet Ocean Vuong
- A workshop on writing short stories
- A panel discussion on the history of Chinatown
- A book launch for a new novel by a local author
